

DREAMLAND ADVENTURES

The Good Pirates By DADDY

CHAPTER I The Pirates' Dance

TWINKLING ISLE was looking its prettiest when the pirate ship, the Merry Magpie, sailed into the bay. The pirates cheered as they looked upon the shore they had long ago called home. They cheered because Peggy and Billy had helped set them free from the diamond in which they had been shut up hundreds of years ago by the magic of Magisco, the fairy wizard. They cheered, too, because they had been changed from gloomy, bad pirates to happy, good pirates.

"Hurrah for freedom!" they shouted. "Hurrah for Twinkling Isle! Hurrah for Peggy and Billy! Hurrah for the glad feeling that comes from being good! Hurrah! Hurrah!"

Peggy and Billy, standing on the deck with Captain Black Eye, the pirate chief, were as happy as the pirates themselves. They felt they had done a fine job in turning the bad pirates into good pirates, thus setting them free.

As the pirates cheered three persons appeared on the beach. They were Folly Wisner, the goblin; Flower of the Forest, the African girl, and Youth of the Lion Heart, the African brave. They had heard the shouts and ran eagerly to greet the ship they saw sailing into the bay.

But Folly Wisner and the African savages gave only one look at the pirate ship, and then they turned and ran as fast as they could to hide among the trees and bushes. They ran because they had seen the flag floating above the pirate ship—the black flag with the white skull and crossbones. They knew that flag meant pirates and they knew pirates usually were bad.

"Oh, I wish they would come back," cried Peggy, as she saw her friends run away. She wanted them to see that the bad pirates had become good pirates.

"You shall have your wish," cried Captain Black Eye. "No one can escape from the bold and cunning crew of the Merry Magpie. Lower away the boats, my hearties!"

So the pirates lowered away the boats, and taking Peggy and Billy, they rowed to shore. When they stepped upon the beach the pirates were so glad to touch land again, they scattered for hundreds of years inside the diamond, they dropped on their knees and kissed the sand. Then at the order of Captain Black Eye they scattered and hid in the woods to hunt the goblin and the two savages. As the pirate chief had said, the pirates were good hunters, and they quickly found Folly Wisner under a bush and Flower of the Forest up a tree. But they didn't catch Flower of the Forest until after a hard fight with Youth of the Lion Heart, who fought nobly to defend her.

The pirates dragged the three captives to the beach, where stood Captain Black Eye, Peggy and Billy had hidden in the shrubbery. "Oh, oh, oh!" wailed Folly Wisner. "Now we are gone. These bad pirates will make us walk the plank. Oh, oh, oh! I wish Peggy and Billy were here to rescue us."
